2 5oz cans tuna, drained

1 8.5oz packet brown rice and quinoa OR 1 3/4 cups cooked grain of choice

3 tablespoons Kewpie mayo

1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce

2-3 teaspoons sriracha

1 teaspoon furikake seasoning* (see note)

for serving: avocado, cucumbers* (see note), green onions, seaweed snacks, edamame, crispy fried onions, furikake seasoning or sesame seeds

Instructions

Tuna rice: Warm brown rice packet in the microwave per package instructions. In a large bowl, combine tuna, rice packet, 3 tablespoons kewpie mayo, 1 tablespoon low sodium soy sauce, 2-3 teaspoons sriracha and 1 teaspoon furikake. Mix well to combine. Taste and season with an extra dollop of mayo if you like it creamier, sriracha if you like it spicier and furikake or pinch of salt for overall flavor.

Toppings: Chop green onions, slice avocado and spritz it with a little lime juice, toss thinly sliced cukes with rice vinegar, salt and sugar, stir thawed edamame with a glug of toasted sesame oil, etc. Choose your journey here.

Assemble: Top several spoonfuls of tuna rice mixture with cucumbers, avocado, green onions, crispy onions and another sprinkle of furikake or sesame seeds. I like to scoop everything up into seaweed snacks and eat it like deconstructed sushi, DELISH.

Notes

- ✳ Furikake seasoning: You can find furikake in the international foods aisle of most grocery stores. But if you do not have it, use one teaspoon of sesame seeds plus pinches of salt and sugar.
- ✳ Cucumbers: I always toss my sliced cucumbers in several tablespoons of seasoned rice vinegar and pinches of salt and sugar. It gives them a quick 'pickled' vibe and lots more flavor.
